

Are you a leader from a state primary school that usually expects teachers to stay onsite to complete their PPA?

Would you be interested in taking part in an EEF-funded trial to evaluate the impact of offsite PPA?

UCL Institute of Education (IOE) and Chartered College of Teaching (CCT) are leading an evaluation of the impact of offsite PPA on teacher retention, which is being funded by the Education Endowment Foundation (EEF).

The aim of the evaluation is to find out the impact of teachers being able to take their PPA time away from the school site on teacher retention, job satisfaction and wellbeing. Schools that take part in the trial will be asked to either keep their current PPA practices, or begin offering offsite PPA, during the 2026-27 academic year.

We are specifically looking to reach leaders from 250 state primary schools that usually expect teachers to stay onsite to complete their PPA.
